Urbanism meets Agroecology

Operational
research and pedagogical
approaches
in Europe

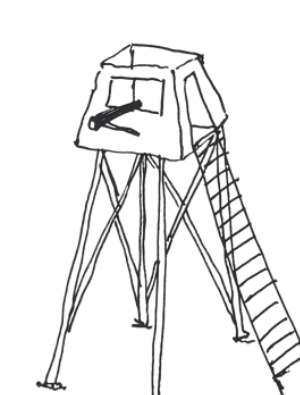

Bringing together a scientific network from seven European universities, the upcoming international study day Urbanism meets Agroecology aims to examine the links between urban planning and agroecology, and the specific approaches being developed across Europe. The meetings are intended to give a voice to everyone, from researchers, designers and teachers to producers, policy-makers and activists. In this way, we want to highlight the emerging and plural relationships that this meeting gives rise to in the forms, means and mechanisms of projects, research and teaching. These relationships create narratives that are grounded and inhabited, and that offer potential for action in a context of climate emergency.
